The precautionary principle (or precautionary approach) generally defines actions on issues considered to be uncertain, for instance applied in assessing risk management. The principle is used by policy makers to justify discretionary decisions in situations where there is the possibility of harm from making a certain decision (e.g. taking a particular course of action) when extensive ...

Economics (/ ɛˈkɒnəmɪks, ɪˈkɒnəm-/) is the social science that studies the production, distribution, and consumption of goods and services.. Economics focuses on the behaviour and interactions of economic agents and how economies work. Microeconomics analyzes basic elements in the economy, including individual agents and markets, their interactions, and the outcomes of interactions.

There are three problems increasingly evident in 'tobacco control' science when it comes to tobacco harm reduction: Contrived and phoney research designed to support pre-existing policy preferences (see previous post). Spin by scientists and activists designed to create some sort of moral panic or adverse change in risk perception out of absolutely nothing.
