Confocal Scanning Laser Ophthalmoscopy. Confocal Laser Ophthalmoscopy (CSLO) is the concept behind the Heidelberg Retinal Tomograph. This technique for precise microscopic imaging was patented in 1955 by Marvin Minsky, now a Professor at M.I.T. Since the original patent, numerous instruments in many areas of science and engineering have utilized this technique to perform precision microscopy.

International Journal of Medical Imaging (IJMI) encourages the submission of manuscripts on imaging of body structure, morphology and function, and imaging of microscopic biological entities. The journal publishes original contributions on medical imaging achieved by various modalities, such as ultrasound, X-rays (including CT) magnetic resonance, radionuclides, microwaves, and light, as well ...

The near-infrared zwitterionic elastin probe ElaNIR for in vivo imaging of elastin structures was found through fluorescent-image-based screening. ElaNIR is well suited for in vitro, ex vivo, and in vivo imaging of elastin and also allows visualization and quantification of elastin levels in young and old mice, which reflect age-dependent changes of elastin in vivo.

Seeing old friends in a new light: A divergent synthesis of quinine and quinidine (see structures) was designed on the basis of a symmetrical and nonstereogenic intermediate, conceptually different from the stereodefined piperidine precursors used in past syntheses. Complementary late-stage local-desymmetrization reactions were developed to access the two targets.

Mineral oils and waxes used in cosmetic products, also referred to as "personal care products" outside the European Union, are mixtures of predominantly saturated hydrocarbons consisting of straight-chain, branched and ring structures with carbon chain lengths greater than C16.
