Chan rhetoric notwithstanding, Chan practice seems to have been more norm-respecting rather than norm-eliding. In keeping with this, when the famous Tang poet, Bo Juyi (772â€“846) asked Chan master Niaokou (741â€“824) about the true meaning of Chan, Niaokou responded, "As for doing evil, avoid it; as for the good, practice sharing it."

A firm's value chain and the way it performs individual activities are a reflection of its history, its strategy, its approach to implementing its strategy, and the underlying economics of the activities themselves. The relevant level for constructing a value chain is a firm's activities in a particular industry (the business unit).
